

DAY 3: WEB APIs

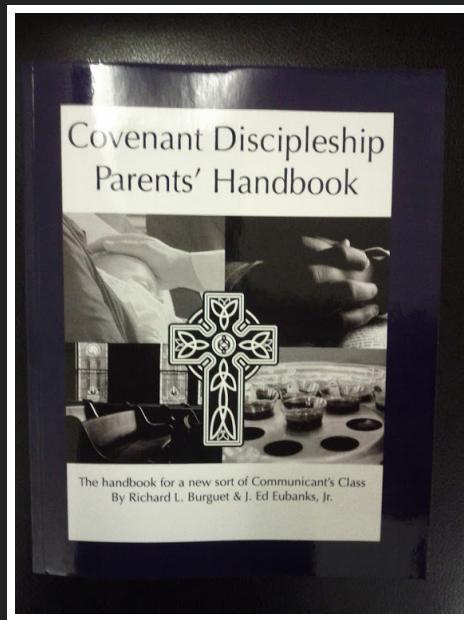

BOT ART

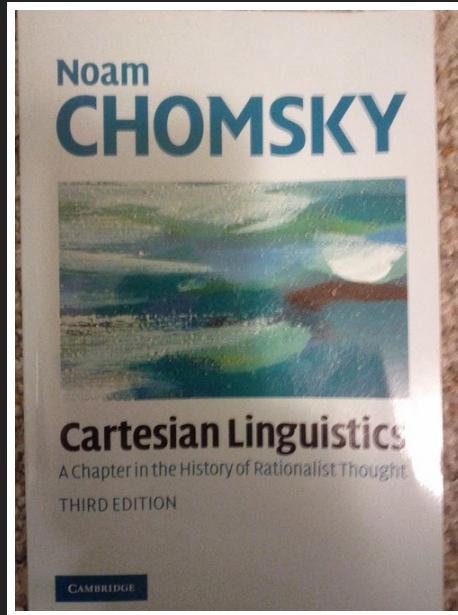

RANDOM SHOPPER

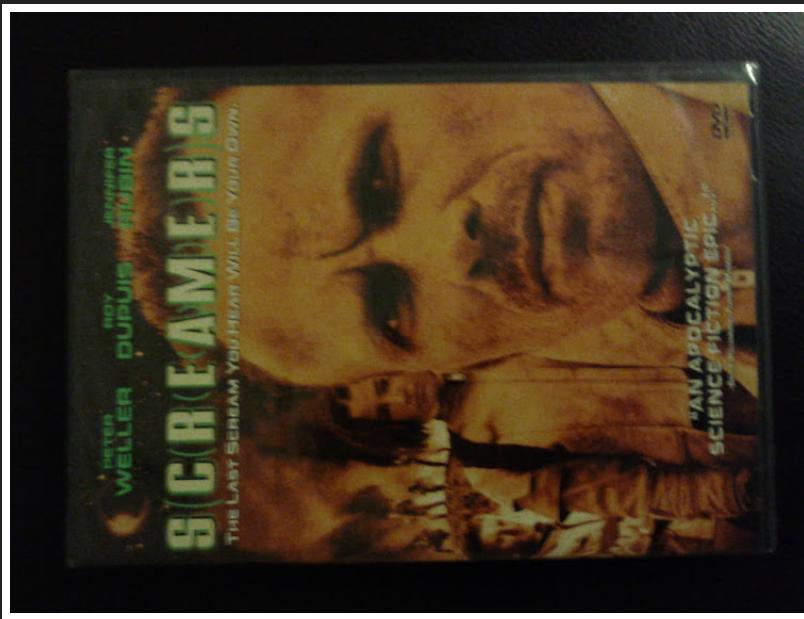

...How about I build something that buys me things completely at random? Something that just... fills my life with crap? How would these purchases make me feel? Would they actually be any less meaningful than the crap I buy myself on a regular basis anyway?

Uses PhantomJS – a virtual, scriptable web browser – to crawl Amazon and deliver random surprise purchases.

Results were catalogued on the project's Tumblr.

RANDOM DARKNET SHOPPER

The Random Darknet Shopper is an automated online shopping bot which we provide with a budget of $100 in Bitcoins per week. Once a week the bot goes on shopping spree in the deep web where it randomly chooses and purchases one item and has it mailed to us.

"DARKNET"

A darknet is a private network where connections are made only between trusted peers — sometimes called "friends" — using non-standard protocols and ports. Darknets are distinct from other distributed peer-to-peer networks as sharing is anonymous.

Swiss Authorities Arrest Bot for Buying Drugs and Fake Passport

Andy Cush Filed to: RANDOM DARKNET SHOPPER 1/22/15 10:03am

A bot created by a group of artists spent the last few months selecting items at random from a Silk Road-style darknet marketplace, buying them with Bitcoin, and having them shipped to a gallery in Switzerland. After it bought some ecstasy pills and a counterfeit passport, we asked: How will authorities deal with the complex legal and moral issue of a piece of artificial intelligence breaking the law? It turns out, the answer was simple: just arrest the computer.
